

A high building near the Taihang Mountains in China amazes any visitor passing through the area. With this structure the Chinese hope to attract as many tourists to Linzhou region.

Taihang Mountains

in

China

's tourism is not sufficiently exploited, so officials in the country have built a scale of 91 meters height on the edge of the wall of

Taihang mountains

, writes British tabloid Daily Mail.

Scale

is particularly attractive since it is high in spiral form and offers an impressive view of the mountains when tourists come to its end.

At first glance it seems quite dangerous scale, especially for those who are afraid of heights. For this reason those dealing with safety of tourists in the area have imposed some rules for those who want to climb the metal construction.
